It's August in Texas. Please Check Your Batteries.

6volt battery severe oxidation close up

Exposed cells causes rapid sulfation

6volts in series and parallel

How often should I inspect my fluid batteries?

The fluid levels will vary depending on the temperature outside. In the warmer months, check them once a month in order to get a feel for how often you should fill them. Everyone uses their batteries to a different extent; some folks use them often and some use them sporadically. So the frequency of check ups will be determined by your type of battery, type of rig and how often the batteries are utilized.

Have you ever wondered where we got our name?

Well, I'll tell you:

In the beginning was emergency road side. Sam Wooldridge and Rodney Simmons were working on the sly making up for the money that they'd lost wrenching under Foretravel after the company dropped Fleetwood, hence greatly reducing their service orders. They were doing it after hours, buying their own parts and whatnot. They decided one of them was going to have to start a mobile RV service. What were they going to call it? Inspiration hit at Rodney's annual family 4th-of-July-liquorfest party in the summer of 1995. Sam had just eaten the worm out of the bottom of the Mescal bottle and said something along the lines of, "With our luck we'll quit our job and only get a call once in a blue moon..." Then, inebriated, he fell backwards in the grass and didn't talk again for a good hour. Rodney registered the company two days later. Sam came on board a few months after the fourth of July party and about a year after that, Rodney bought his shares. Sam went on to a successful career at McClain's and Rodney is still at Blue Moon. And that's how the name came about, really. As a joke. And now you know the rest of the story.
